The university can be a center for and a model of cultural creation, debate, service, and political exchange among citizens of the future, one that is dominated not by commerce and a narrow definition of utility but by a love of learning.

— Leon Botstein, President of Bard College, from Jefferson’s Children

THE B.A. CURRICULUM

At Bard College Berlin, students from over sixty countries across six continents acquire the fundamental disciplinary and historical knowledge needed for approaching the concerns and opportunities of the twenty-first century, and master a specialization in a field of the humanities or social sciences.

B.A. IN HUMANITIES, THE ARTS, AND SOCIAL THOUGHT

The degree in Humanities, the Arts, and Social Thought provides a classic liberal arts education centered on a core curriculum in the history of knowledge, and on the pursuit of specialist study in politics, philosophy, art, or literature from foundational to advanced level. Alongside these two elements, students choose from electives in many other areas including the practicing arts, social activism, and language learning. Above all, the program is an integrated course of study, focused on the key questions and challenges that gave rise to the formation of individual disciplines, and which continue to connect and animate them. Graduates have undertaken further study in humanities and social sciences at some of the most prestigious universities in the world. They pursue careers in academia, journalism, management in the cultural, business and nongovernmental sectors, and in artistic and curatorial practice.

- Art and Aesthetics – art history, aesthetic theory, visual and practicing arts
- Ethics and Politics – moral philosophy, the history of political thought, social theory
- Literature and Rhetoric – poetry, film, theater, literary analysis, cultural theory

B.A. IN ECONOMICS, POLITICS, AND SOCIAL THOUGHT

The B.A. in Economics, Politics, and Social Thought connects the study of economics with historical and contemporary forms of political and social thought. The program provides in-depth exploration of economics and politics while creating the opportunity to examine key questions that guide decision-making in the public and private sectors, such as: how should society allocate its scarce resources? How do individuals, organizations, or governments make decisions? How rational are these? How do we improve quality of life? What constitutes a fair distribution of resources? How much inequality is tolerable? The program treats economics and politics as at once moral and empirical sciences, providing students with rigorous training in research methods, and knowledge of philosophy and ethics. It prepares graduates for further study in politics or economics, or for careers in the fields of public policy, international relations, economics, or political science.

- Economics – economics & ethics, economics & psychology, econometrics, global economics, and environmental economics
- Politics – international studies, comparative politics, political philosophy, and social science methodology
For me, studying liberal arts at BCB is about studying something I am truly interested in, something that changes me, but that also hands the responsibility of change back to me. It is an education that reveals opportunities, and strongly encourages me to work with them myself.

STUDENT LIFE

The student body at Bard College Berlin is small yet highly international. Currently students come from 60 different countries. The student body includes not only full-time Bard College Berlin students, but also visiting students from the international Bard College network, the European ERASMUS exchange network, and other partner institutions. Recently, Bard College Berlin has created a special scholarship program for individuals from areas of crisis. These students, along with the entire student body, enrich the campus community and solidify Bard College Berlin’s place in a truly global network of higher education institutions.

From the dozen student-led clubs to the full-time Student Life staff, students are engaged in building their community. Current clubs include the Debate Club, Student Parliament, and Life Drawing Club. Many students live on-campus in dormitories or shared apartments. Each building has a Student Residential Assistant who, along with the full-time live-in residential life staff, provides both programming efforts and 24/7 on-call coverage for emergency situations.

Student Life also supports students with both mental health and physical health issues. There is a part time psychological counselor as well as a part time doctor on-campus. Students are also referred to off campus supports as needed. The Student Life professional staff also supports students in navigating the ‘bureaucracy of living in Germany’ thus enabling them to focus more adeptly on their studies.

CIVIC ENGAGEMENT

Bard College Berlin supports student involvement with public life outside the classroom to promote commitment to active citizenship and to contribute to an engaged university. Through student-led projects and volunteer work, Bard College Berlin works to support positive social change both locally and internationally.

Students cooperate across the Bard Network by joining international conferences or training, by sharing resources, or running joint cross-campus projects around the globe.

Bard College Berlin offers and assists with the following Civic Engagement initiatives:
- Civic Engagement Fellowship Program
- Student-run civic engagement projects include: Lingo 101 offering instruction in four languages, Social Clowning, Prost to Compost environmental initiative
- Campus Conversations (with refugees and community participants)
- Volunteer work opportunities
- Student-run debate training and participation in international tournaments
- Events and workshops for skill development
- Engaged Liberal Arts courses

FACULTY & ALUMNI

Bard College Berlin’s permanent international faculty of academics and artists have earned their degrees and taught at leading universities including Cambridge, Columbia, Freie Universität, Harvard, Heidelberg, Humboldt, the New School for Social Research, Princeton, UC Berkeley, and the University of Chicago. Arts faculty include prize-winning artists and internationally prominent curators. Each semester, visiting academics, artists, and writers offer courses that bring additional variety and new perspectives.

Bard College Berlin graduates join a network of alumni who are studying and working around the world. After graduation, alumni remain closely connected to the College.
